

Hairball!

You've heard the one about the guy who got his necktie stuck in a shredder, right? Well, that's nothing compared to this. Last month an Army civil service aircraft maintenance tech was literally scalped when his long hair got caught on the rotating shaft of the helo he was servicing.

Step back and look at the big picture folks. The combination of moving parts with loose clothing, long hair or jewelry is just an open invitation for disaster. Secure those snag-hazards whether you're working on something big or just using an electric drill.
